International Conference on Law and Society (ICLAS)

Harun M. Hashim Law Centre with like minded partners has embarked on scholarship activities in promoting better understanding on the interaction between law and society and the legal system of the Southeast Asia in particular and the world in general. Following the successful pioneering ICLAS conference co-organised by Harun M. Hashim Law Centre and the Universitas Muhammadiyah Yogyakarta, Indonesia, on 15-17 February 2013, Harun M. Hashim Law Centre hosted the second International Conference on Law and Society (ICLAS II) at the International Islamic University Malaysia (IIUM) in Kuala Lumpur, from 18 to 19 September 2013. The third installment of ICLAS will be at the University of Istanbul with the cooperation between 3 universities namely Faculty of Law, University of Istanbul together with Harun M. Hashim Law Centre, International Islamic University Malaysia (IIUM) and Faculty of Law and International Relations, University of Sultan Zainal Abidin, Malaysia.

CALL FOR PAPERS

The conference would like to examine the contribution of law in remedying the problems in the society in general and in the governance of the state. Among the questions that the conference seeks to answer regarding the interaction between the law and the society are the legal system including the courts and the dispute resolution mechanisms; the constitution or the relations between various organs of the state; the financial and economic system; the sustainable development and management of natural resources and international relations between states. In line with the conference theme "Contribution of Law in Remediying the Ailments in the Society and the State", it is hope that the papers will answer the question on the role of law in resolving problems in a country and between states.
To this end, proposals for papers are invited on any of the following topics:

1. legal system including law making, dispute resolution, legal education and legal professions;
2. state organs and relations between individuals and the state;
3. intra and inter relations between individuals and groups along class, ethincs and religious lines;
4. neo-colonialism, international relations and globalization;
5. management and development of natural resources;
6. economics and financial systems;
7. Other topics related to the conference theme.

The organiser encourages the participation of all persons interested in law, society and the state from all over the world, whether established or junior scholars, academics or practitioners, government officials and NGO officers, by inviting applications as paper presenters and participants.
